DDAP has announced the availability of an online training module for Drug and Alcohol Confidentiality through TrainPA. This training – which is one of the required classes for CRS certification – is a review of the federal and state confidentiality laws and regulations protecting the privacy of those seeking and receiving services for Substance Use Disorders. It is designed to help participants gain the basic knowledge needed to effectively perform their job duties within the parameters of confidentiality protections.

The online training module may be completed in lieu of the classroom Confidentiality training and must be completed before attending the Practical Applications for Confidentiality training.

Visit <https://www.bcdac.org/resources/trainings.php> for more information and to access this online training.
